

If I

Chapter 1 by Tubaiste

If I had the chance to see the world through your eyes if only for a moment I would never look. I would keep them shut while I counted each second until that moment had passed. I would wonder what it would have been like had I opened them to take it all in. I would be more afraid to see the pain that you keep hidden within, the beauty, the happiness, but the thing I would fear most would be disappointment that I see less or more. There would be nothing more painful than having to live behind my eyes if I ever had the chance to see the world through your eyes.
